PUSS REFORMS

"I" said Puss to himself thoughtfully, "have been a bad egg! I'm ashamed of myself! Playin' all those tricks on poor Boots, chasin' him, knockin' him out! Now that I think of it, I haven't been very nice . . . but I'm gonna change all that! Yessir! I'm gonna reform!"

Maybe it was the sun, all warm and mellow, maybe it was the sight of poor Boots, catching a quiet nap a few feet away, maybe it was Puss's better nature, coming through at last! Nobody knows. But there was no doubt that Puss felt very sorry for his past misdeeds and mischief and was ready to put a stop to all that nonsense.

"The first thing I'm gonna do is bury all my junk, so even if I wanna play a trick on Boots, I won't be able to!" he said.

Gathering up his supplies, Puss carried them to a spot beneath a large tree. In his arms, he had several small sticks of dynamite, a box of large wooden matches, a handful of thumbtacks, some wire, lots of noise-makers and a heavy wooden mallet.

As Puss began to shovel into the earth, Boots opened one drowsy eye and then the other . . . wide! Why, what was Puss up to this time? What was he doin' with all that junk, planin' another trick on him? Hmm . . . looked like dynamite an' matches an' lots of unpleasant stuff!

"Well!" exclaimed Boots. "Thought he could put one over on me while I wuz asleep, huh? Well, he won't catch me nappin' this time!"

Waiting until Puss had dropped all of the stuff into the hole and covered it with earth again, Boots tip-toed up behind him and shouted, "Boo!"

Puss jumped. "Oh, it's you, pal!" he exclaimed as he came to earth. "Look, chum, I've decided to bury the hatchet an' . . ."

"Oh, no ya don't! You're not foolin' me!" Boots snarled. "Gimme the shovel! I'm gonna dig that stuff up again!"

"No, no, no, you don't understand!" Puss cried. "I'm only tryin' to fix things so we'll never . . ."

"Save your breath!" Boots advised him, seizing the shovel and digging furiously. "You're always up ta somethin'! Well, this time I'm too smart for ya, see? This time, I'm too . . ."

The shovel must have hit the matches buried below, for suddenly . . . blam! crash! pow! The ground beneath Boots exploded, sending him into the air so high that he was a mere speck! And then . . . blam! crash! pow! . . . back to earth with a thud that knocked him out!

When Boots came to, Puss was fanning him and saying anxiously, "I'm sorry, Boots, it wuz an accident, believe me!"

"You tricked me!" Boots said. "An' I'll get even!" He aimed a blow at Puss.

Slowly, Puss picked up the wooden mallet that Boots had dug up. "I see that I just can't reform!" he said. "Okay, Boots, if that's how ya want it, start runnin'! We're back ta normal again!"

Blunderbunny's SLEEPING PILL

“YAWN!N!N!N!” Bunky’s mouth opened so wide, that his face almost disappeared from view.

“What’s the matter with you, Bunky, sleepy?” Blunderbunny asked.

Bunky yawned again. “Sleepy’s no word for it,” he sighed. “I don’t know what’s wrong with me, Blunderbunny! I haven’t been able to sleep for three whole days and nights and I can’t stand it any more! My eyes keep closin’, I snore instead of talkin’ an’ I keep yawnin’ all the time. But I can’t sleep!”

Blunderbunny snapped his fingers. “Nonsense!” he said. “Think nothing of it! It so happens that I have an invention, personally invented by me, that will make you sleep like a baby!”

“Have you? Really?” Bunky’s eyes were hopeful. “Gosh, I’d give anything to be able to sleep!”

“Then just swallow this!” Blunderbunny produced from his pocket an enormous pill, quite the biggest pill that Bunky had ever seen. “Just swallow this!” he repeated.

Bunky hesitated. The pill was so large that he didn’t see how he could swallow it! But he was so tired and so sleepy, that he put the pill into his mouth and gulped.

“Oh. Oh. Oh!” he managed to gasp. “It’s stuck!”

Sure enough, the huge pill was stuck in Bunky’s throat and refused to budge. Blunderbunny could see it, like an Adam’s apple.

Bunky was very uncomfortable. He gurgled and choked and tried his best to swallow, but the pill would not go down. Blunderbunny advised him to drink some water, but even that didn’t help.

Finally, Bunky became desperate. He began to pound himself on the back, so that the pill would budge. He smacked himself and he slapped himself, but nothing happened. Then, in desperation, Bunky socked himself on the chest . . . hard!

In fact, he hit himself so hard, that he staggered into the wall with a crash. Above him, a mirror shook on the wall and then, zoom! It came crashing down, hitting Bunky square in the middle of his head, and the pill popped out of his mouth!

For one instant, Bunky remained upright. Then, smiling happily, he slid to the floor, his eyes closing and a dreamy snore emerging from his lips.

He was asleep at last!

As for Blunderbunny, he was as proud as ever he had been!

“How do ya like that?” he grinned, patting Bunky on his sleeping head. “My invention worked!”

UP-TO-DATE IKE

ALKALI IKE, leading his trusty horse through town, stopped to stare into a store window. There were automobiles in that store, and Ike looked at them longingly.

"Hosses!" he said suddenly. "Fooey! Who needs 'em? Allus wanta be fed er watered er some sech foolishness! Now, take a here-now up-to-date car! That's bein' modern! A hoss is plumb old-fashioned!"

Now, Oatsie's feelings were hurt when he heard these ungrateful words from his old friend and master, but he pretended not to care, even when Ike led him into the store and asked how much a car cost.

But Oatsie almost cried when his master picked out an old junk-heap, patted it tenderly on the right front fender and said, "I'll swap muh hoss fer this!"

And that's exactly what happened! In less than two minutes, Alkali Ike was behind the driver's wheel, tooting the horn and driving out of town. "Yessir, this is more like it!" he grinned. "Bet this'll git me across the desert in jig-time!"

Rattling and clanking, the old jalopy went into the desert with Ike at the wheel. "This is great!" Ike smiled, as he watched the scenery whizz past. "No more feedin' an' waterin' an old nag!"

Suddenly, he heard a queer sound. It was something between a moan and a groan and came from the front of the jalopy, where the engine was. Then, a fountain of water spurted up from the front of the car, all the wheels shuddered and shook . . . and the old jalopy stopped!

Ike tried everything . . . turning the steering wheel, pressing the horn, even looking at the engine itself. He hit things with a hammer and changed all the tires around, and spoke coaxingly to the old jalopy, but it wouldn't budge.

Almost three hours went by. Ike was tired and disgusted, and worse than all, stranded in the middle of the desert. He had begun to hate the old jalopy, which just stood there, not making a sound.

"Tarnation! Drat! Thunderation!" Ike exclaimed angrily.

"Ahem!" Someone seemed to be clearing his throat nearby. Ike looked up and there, leaning against a cactus, was Oatsie—good old faithful Oatsie.

"Oatsie!" Ike yelled. "My chum! My pal! Please, please take me outta here!"

At first, Oatsie pretended not to hear him and kept looking scornfully at the jalopy, but Ike pleaded and begged for help. Finally, Oatsie allowed Ike to attach a tow-line between him and the rattle-trap car. Patiently, Oatsie pulled the car and Ike back to the town from which they had come, and stopped in front of the automobile store.

Ike sprang out of the car and ran into the store. A few seconds later, he came out and put his arms lovingly around Oatsie's neck. "I traded the car back again . . . fer you!" he whispered. "Why, you're worth a hunderd o' them pesky ol' things! An' besides, Oatsie . . . yer a pal!"

Oatsie nuzzled Ike gently with his velvety nose. "You said it!" he whinnied happily.
